Pratima's women: mix of tradition & the modern

Pratima sheth is passionately involved in painting. She had some problems about continuing her "Obsession" with art but she could overcome it because of her total involvement. Over the years, she has done a great deal of work and written on art as well. Her life has been one long creative journey...

She explains the title "Perspective" given to her shows. "It reflects an analysis of an inner reality - of imagination.

It is also part of mystery; it is the depth of the variation of my pursuit of art and also the depth in the change of space and distance from where one sees the work really of the inner eye."

She always did what she thought was right. She says: "I have developed a style of colour application following my intention which has created a work of art uniquely my own."

Pratima's figurative works deal specifically with Indian women - the focal point being the expression of their varied feelings and moods at different phases in their life.

The exhibition, which is at Jehangir Art Gallery will go on till Sunday.
